BIRSKY and ZAPP

By MONTAGUE GLASS

"THE HIGH cost of living is terrible expensive nowadays."

Louis Birsky the real estate remanded, as he seated himself opposite Barnet Zapp in Wasserburg's Restaurant. This observation had been provoked by a notice in the bill of fare that on and after a certain date the 40 cent regular dinner would be increased to 50 cents, and Zapp looked up from a plate of loxshen soup with a nod so emphatic that drops of the greasy fluid were scattered all around.

"I bet yer," Zapp said, cleansing his mustache with his lower lip. "Only this morning I see it costs Marcus Fast two thousand dollars for an automobile already."

"You don't tell me!" Louis exclaimed.

"And Harris Shapopluk must also got to pay for some diamonds fifteen hundred dollars," Zapp continued, while Birsky wagged his head from side to side and made incoherent noises through his nose indicative of shocked surprise.

"I always thought them two fellers was pretty swindling with their money," he commented.

"A couple of tighter propositions don't exist at all," Zapp agreed.

"Then what do they go to work and buy all them things for?" Birsky asked.

"Who says they bought 'em?" Zapp asked. "All I says is that Marcus Fast pays two thousand dollars for an automobile and Harris Shapopluk pays fifteen hundred dollars for some diamonds, understand me, but it was Jacob J. Reibfeld who bought the automobile and Sam Pittz bought the diamonds. Also I could prove it to you black on white."

Here he produced a clipping which read as follows:

BUSINESS TROUBLES

Birfeld & Pittz—In the business of Birfeld & Pittz, cloak and suit manufacturers, were filed in the office of the clerk of the United States District Court yesterday. The principal creditors are as follows: Franco-American Woolen Co., $1,422.55 Kosciusko Bank (secured), $0,642.99 M. Fast & Co., $2,000.00 H. Shapopluk & Son, $1,235.00

"What did them Franco-American people pay for?" Birsky asked. "A steam yacht?"

"I couldn't tell you exactly," Zapp replied, "but you could reckon twenty-five hundred dollars that Mrs. Birfeld must go to get to Palm Beach a year ago, understand me, and another couple thousand that Bertha Pittz is the Belle of the Boardwalk in Arverne last summer, Birsky, and that's the way it goes."

"They two boys certainly lived beyond their means," Zapp said.

"And it ain't their fault that they didn't live beyond Marcus Fast's means and Harris Shapopluk's means also, because when a business man starts in to live beyond his means, Birsky, he's got a downtown conscience and an upstairs conscience. That's why when Birfeld buys his automobile on Broadway and Fifty-second Street for net cash, he doesn't worry himself much he owes to a couple of Canal Street woolen houses like Marcus Fast and Harris Shapopluk."

"Ain't it funny how most of them extravagant fellers is got such an elegant reputation for good pay?" Birsky said.

"On the West Side above Forty-second Street," Zapp responded. "And that's what I'm telling you, Birsky. Marcus Fast pays for Birfeld's automobile, just so sure as if he would."

Losing Venture.

"Do you know anything about the million of this play?" asked the man with the horn-rimmed spectacles.

"If you mean the chap who's bucking this show?" answered the amiable low-brow. "I guess he's off somewhere wishing he could kick himself."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

SAW NO USE IN GETTING UP

Correspondent in City Visited by Zep-pelins Simply Stayed in Bed and Touched Wood.

I was visited at the time of the first Zeppelin raid in a little, snappy house of three floors and six apartments. The house was packed with the original tenants, Jew and Greek, together with such lodgers as myself. In my flat of four rooms and a kitchen were the landlord and his lady, two sons and two daughters. The sons slept on the sitting-room floor, and if you came home in the dark you were likely to tread on them. Two French officers shared the best bedroom while I slept alone in the second best. "Bang-bang-bang" went the bombs from the Zeppelins! The French officers cried "Eau basse!" and the boys hopped at my door yelling "Enfants!" which is Greek for "Forwards" as it didn't seem to matter much where one went, the whole thing, falling bombs, being purely a question of luck. I stayed in bed and touched wood. The cracks of the big bombs were terrifying. The house shook with each explosion; but as all things—good or bad—must come to an end, so too after a while ended this business. A wonderful orange-colored blaze lit up the world outside, and so I got out of bed and watched it, dreading at last to dream and see things as soon quarters.—Albert Kitterman, in the Atlantic.

Escaped Chair.

He might object to the use of his name, but his politics are F. D. R. He says he is a reformer for socialism but has the right to lead in various directions. That is he thought to pass a vote in an electrical way several days ago. He is in the neighborhood clubs for a good rest when a stamping matador raised him to his feet. The crowd had become tired of that matador and had raised the chair so that the pressure of a button would raise the matador while others the press to the chair. F. D. R. is careful where he sits now, especially about his feet.
